Teaching and Consultation in Clinical Hypnosis: Train the Trainer Dr. Gary Elkins

Teaching and consultation in clinical hypnosis is enhanced by familiarity with the Standards of Training (Hammond & Elkins, 1994; Elkins & Hammond, 1998), formulating learning objectives, skill in leading small group practice sessions, ethical guidelines, consideration of Certification in Clinical Hypnosis, and providing case consultation.

This session will provide an overview of the current Standards of Training and continued application. The integration of emerging clinical research and clinical methods will be discussed. Also, some considerations in conducting small group practice sessions will be discussed with clinical examples and ethical considerations during clinical teaching.

In the second half of this session on teaching and consultation in clinical hypnosis, participants will have an opportunity to share their experience and time will be allotted for question and answer as well as role play as may be relevant to the discussion.

Outline

I. Train the Trainer

- Discuss Standards of Training in Clinical Hypnosis
  - The development and formulation of learning objectives
- Integration of emerging clinical research and clinical methods into teaching clinical hypnosis
- Conducting Small Group Practice Sessions
  - The mechanics and what to look for in participants during interactions, hypnotic inductions, alerting, and ethical issues that can emerge in sessions
- Case consultation and learning contracts

II. Question and Answer: Discussion Session

- Bring your questions and ideas for training in clinical hypnosis
- Beginning to Advanced levels of training
- Discuss challenges to training new professionals in clinical hypnosis
- How to integrate emerging knowledge, trends, and evidence-based practice and research informed interventions into clinical hypnosis training.
